DANIEL & HENRY
INSURANCE AND RISK MANAGEMENT

OSHA Top 10 Most Cited Standards

Fiscal Year 2025

OSHA has published the final data on the agency's top 10 most frequently cited standards for fiscal year 2025 following inspections of worksites by federal OSHA compliance officers. The agency aims to alert employers to these commonly cited standards so they can take steps to find and fix these recognized standards before they show up. Workers suffer preventable injuries, illnesses, and deaths related to these standards.

Yeah, yeah, yeah… so what's the big deal?

Aside from being potentially responsible for injuring employees, these OSHA penalties are often listed as "serious" violations, which can cost up to $16,550 per violation. Furthermore, if an employer is aware of the hazard and is willful or repeated, the violation can reach up to $165,514 per violation.

~OSHA Standards~

Contact Colin Zuber (Loss Control Consultant) if you need help identifying risks associated with these standards!